Dersin Amacı	This course will explore cultural notions related to etiology, diagnosis, and treatment of autism spectrum disorder (ASD). Autism is currently widely affecting 1 in 54 children in the US and it is considered a global health issue. The course will discuss in-depth the cultural considerations and issues around how autism is conceptualized, diagnosed, and treated with various intervention methodologies. In particular, the course will focus on the developmental perspective of autism in childhood. Students will also learn to conduct literature review, work collaboratively with peers, and use ASD screening instruments.
